THOMAS ORAM

Personal.
Mr. Wm. Dilworth has gone East on a visit.

We are pleased to welcome Dr. Porter back again in Prince Albert after an absence of over two months. The Doctor has been past the summit of the Rockies as far as Silver City, about 131 miles west of Calgary. He says he enjoyed the trip very much, but after all he says, he has come to the conclusion that Prince Albert is the best place in the North West. We will be pleased to publish an account of his tour, which would be interesting to our readers.

We congratulate our lively contemporary, the Edmonton Bulletin, upon entering the fifth year of its existence. The Bulletin always contains a great deal of North West news, and the editorials are written with care and ability. We wish it long life and prosperity.

What has become of the Battleford Herald? It has not reached our sanctum for many a day.

The Hudson Bay Company have put in a claim against the Dominion Government for $50,000 indemnity for alleged losses sustained in the Riel rebellion. What about the loss of the land received near Fort Garry?

Mrs. McDougall, wife of chief clerk Jas. McDougall, of the H. B. Co., Edmonton, died suddenly a few days ago. Her many friends here will hear with regret of her sudden death.

THE ST. ANDREW'S DINNER

How it passed has been the topic of conversation, and a jolly good time all around.

The dinner of the St. Andrew's Society of Prince Albert, on Friday night last (St. Andrew's Day), was in every respect a great success, and the committee deserve much credit for the admirable manner in which their arrangements were carried out. The dining hall (in Mr. Thomas McKay's new house) was tastefully decorated with flags, banneters and evergreens. Over the Chair a large union jack was displayed, with a St. Andrew's cross in the centre made of evergreens. On the top was the motto, "Nemo me impune lacessit," and below, "We're a Jack Tamson's Bannet," in light letters.

The tables were arranged in the form of a room and were completely filled, about forty-five sitting down.

The chair was occupied by the President of the Society, Mr. John Stewart, and the vice-chair by Thomas McKay and George Miller, Vice Presidents.

The company sat down about seven o'clock to a very nicely cooked and served dinner, which would have done credit to an older town and better furnished market than Prince Albert can afford. The waiters, Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, of the Saskatchewan Club, are entitled to the highest praise for being able to furnish such an admirable service, served in such good style. The following is the

MENU:

Soup—A la Julienne.
Scotch Broth.
Oyster Patties. Scalloped Oysters.
Scotch Haggis.
Boiled Leg of Mutton—Capar Sauce.
Ham and Tongue.
Roast Beef—Hatchet of Mutton.
Pumpkin and Mince Pie.
Spinach and Cauliflower.
Currant Loaf and Short Bread.
Custards, Cheese, Nuts, Raisins, Confectionery.

After the cloth was drawn, the Chairman gave the following toast:—"The Queen," which was received with hearty, loyal cheers.

"The Prince of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," also warmly received.

"The new Governor General, Lord Lansdowne."

The Chairman and from what he had read and heard of our new Governor General, he believed that the British Government had made a wise selection, and that he would prove a worthy and capable of Lord Dufferin and the Marquis of Lorne. He had filled positions of trust and importance on three different occasions in the British Colonies, and from his large experience as a statesman and public man he had no doubt but that his administration would prove a success. This toast was received with loud cheers.

Song from T. O. Davis—"The Dea Laid Shamrock."

To His Honor, Lieutenant Governor Dewdney and the N. W. Council.

"The pious memory of St. Andrew," drunk in solemn silence.

"The day, and all who honor it."

The President, in proposing this toast, said that only a few weeks ago a few Scotchmen and their descendants met in the town and determined to form a St. Andrew's Society. They had now the proud satisfaction of announcing that they had a membership of seventy, and before the next anniversary he believed that they would have over 100. The country was natural to every race, but he believed it was particularly strong in Scotchmen. He was pleased to see so many that evening celebrating and honoring St. Andrew's day. He would give the toast with Highland honors, which was responded to in good form as far as the limited space would allow.

Song from James Sanderson—"Scots wha hae."

The senior Vice President, Mr. Thomas McKay, then took up the toast list and gave:

"The Army, Navy and Volunteers," conjuring the names of Col. Spence and Capt. Young, who responded ably and feelingly. We may say here that all the speeches have up to the mark and in eloquence, patriotism, pathos, wit and humor were equalled by any delivered by those of another society at perhaps more pretentious entertainments. We can only regret that our limited space will prevent us from giving more than a brief abstract.

Capt. Young did not altogether agree with the way President that love of country was more strongly developed in the Scotch than other nationalities. He referred to the process displayed by his countrymen, the fish, and the English also, who fought side by side with the Highlanders at Tel El Kelah and on many other bloody fields. On one occasion like the present, it would be inviolable to particularize any nationality as being distinguished for love of country. He believed they would all do their duty when occasion required.

Col. Spence, as a retired colonel of the militia, but still ready for active duty, had great pleasure in following his friend Capt. Young in responding to the toast just drunk. He referred in glowing terms to the trials of war, of which we all feel proud, and especially to the achievements of the fleet under Admiral Seymour, in the grand bombardment of Alexandria in the late Egyptian war. As regards the other arm of the service, the Volunteers, of which, their efficiency and patriotism had been already proved, and he had no doubt that if occasion required they would still be found ready to shoulder arms and march to the front to meet any invading foe.

The next toast was "The Clergy," coupled with the names of the chaplains, Rev. Archibald Mackay (who was absent) and Rev. Mr. McWilliam. This toast was received with applause, the company singing "For they are holy good fellows."

Rev. Mr. McWilliam, in responding to the toast, after thanking the Vice President for the kind terms in which it had been proposed, and the company for the unexpected and unadvised assurance that he and his brethren were "jolly good fellows," said that although this was the first time in his life that he had been called upon to speak on such an occasion, he did not think that he was out of place there. It was his conviction that religion should touch every part of human life, should be brought into close contact with all the business of life, and even with their amusements, and he felt particularly that if people would only carefully avoid all hurtful excesses and obnoxious associations they would find their religious teachers quite willing to approve of every moment of enjoyment. Religion was the only thing that could make us happy in the next life, and he did not believe it was unnecessary to make us miserable and gloomy in the present. He congratulated the society on the magnificent dinner which had been provided. It reminded him of a saying of a Jewish Rabi at a dinner in London. After eating he was manfully through four or five courses the overpowered wit, seeing the waiters about to set forth a fresh array of dishes, pushed back his chair and said to his hosts, "Gentlemen, if you don't object, I will take the rest out in money." He thought most of the guests here shared the feeling, except that he was sure they had no desire to meddle with the treasury of the Society. Mr. McWilliam, while expressing his good wishes for this Society of Scotchmen, said he wished to remind them that some peculiarities of the Scotch character might very easily degenerate into vices, which would only make them ridiculous in the eyes of others. Many born (like himself) in that grand old land, had received too full an answer to the Scotchman's prayer: "He be honest wae a guid counsellor of ourselves." He sold two capital stories illustrating Scotch caution or "caimness" might descend into selfishness and hatred, and Scotch thrift into miserly meanness. He ventured to say how easy, from what he had seen of the land, some contributions to readily given to every good cause were to be found in Prince Albert, that the St. Andrew's Society of this place need no need of being guarded against such a danger. Congratulating the society on the successful inauguration, and their wisdom and patriotism in securing themselves as one of the chaplains, he concluded his speech amidst great applause.

Rev. Caleb Parker said that although an Englishman he had much pleasure in being present on this occasion. He had been his pleasure to live for some years in old Scotland, and he had a sincere regard and admiration for the Scotch character. The rev. gentleman went on to say that he had spent some years of his life in Canada, and every succeeding year convinced him more and more that there was a grand future in store for this country, which was destined so long to take its place in the forefront of the nations of the world. He concluded an eloquent speech by drawing a vivid picture of the future prosperity and advancement of Prince Albert.

Rev. Canon Platt was loudly called for and briefly responded, thanking the company for coupling his name with the toast, and saying in every language he felt in doing with the St. Andrew's Society of Prince Albert.

Mr. Robert Thompson then sang a song—"Just a wee chap in our ee," very successfully.

A recreation was then very well given by M. Wm. Campbell.

The next toast given by the Vice President was "The Learned Profession," coupled with the names of S. C. Elliot and Dr. Bain.

Mr. Elliot, in responding for the legal profession, said that being an Irishman, of course he could not claim kinship with his brother Scot, except in name. He regretted very much for the sake of the public that there were only few lawyers in the place, for it was well known that the more lawyers there were, the better the place in every way. He then pictured the condition of affairs in Prince Albert before the arrival of the first legal luminary which adorned this North Western hemisphere. Business was stagnant. A universal apathy prevailed. Those who had grievances and wrongs had no means of getting redress. Against every work out from the world and in law, and now that they had come in they were considerable numbers, he was almost too blessing was not properly appreciated or enjoyed. In conclusion he expressed his pleasure at being present at the first dinner of the St. Andrew's Society of Prince Albert, and the first of the kind in the North West Territories, and wished it long life and prosperity.

Dr. Bain replied for the medical profession in a very neat speech. He was not a Scotchman born, he was not due to it, being of Scotch descent on both sides, and he had spent some pleasant years in old Scotland, which country had produced some of the most brilliant and distinguished members of his profession, amongst the foremost of whom was Sir James Simpson, the celebrated discoverer of chloroform, and many others celebrated in science and the world of letters. He had great pleasure in being present to celebrate the festival of St. Andrew.

"Our guests" was loudly acknowledged by Capt. Young.

"The Ladies," by the Secretary of the Society, Mr. W. Napier, who was most active and attentive to the wants of the guests. Mr. Napier expressed his regret at the absence of the ladies, and hoped that their next meeting would be graced by the presence of the fair sex.

"The Press," acknowledged by Mr. Fitz Catharine.

"Banking, Agriculture and Commerce" were generally acknowledged in neat speeches by Messrs J. H. Knowles, Wm. Miller and William Stewart.

Mr. W. R. Gunn, in response to the toast of "The Land we live in and the land we live on," referred briefly to the topography of Scotland, its grandeur and the beauty of its scenery, to its educational institutions, a school, and literary. He drew for some time on the distinguishing features of the Scottish people, and depicted in glowing terms the prowess of the Highland soldiers, as witnessed at Tel El Kelah, and on many modern fields of battle. Mr. Gunn then referred to the extent to which Scotch men had spread over every part of the globe. With regard to the land we live in, Mr. Gunn referred to the past history of Canada briefly, and after pointing out the advance that had been made in the North West Territories and Manitoba, he said that he had no reason to be pessimistic in an eloquent and forcible manner about a bright and prosperous future for the Canadian people as a nation.

"Our Albert friends," briefly acknowledged by Mr. J. J. Campbell.

"The Dinner Committee" was nearly responded to by the secretary, Mr. W. Napier, who thanked all those who had given their assistance in getting up the entertainment, especially Mr. Thomas McKay for the use of his house, the members of the Saskatchewan Club for empty favors, and those gentlemen who had kindly lent the flags and assisted in decorating the room and generally had aided in making this, the first dinner of St. Andrew's Society of Prince Albert, the successful hope of it had proved to be. His only regret was that their limited space prevented them from inviting more of their friends to join them on the occasion.

"Our next meeting" was then given. After which "Auld Lang Syne" was sung in good style, and the company separated, well pleased with the entertainment and with each other.

RECREATION SCENES

The committee of this Club encouraged by the success of the opening entertainment, have decided to give another musical and literary evening on Tuesday next, the 11th inst., at 7:30 o'clock, in the Club Rooms. The entertainment will consist of readings and recitations, vocal and instrumental music, trials and quartettes, comic songs, comic solos, etc. Several well known lady and gentlemen amateurs, have kindly consented to assist, and a programme has been arranged which will give satisfaction and pleasure to all who may attend. Admission twenty-five cents, towards the funds of the Club. The Secretary thankfully acknowledges a donation of $5. from Dr. Pater, also the receipt of a number of copies of London (Eng.) Tablet, Catholic Record, La Manitoba and Le Petit valetier from Rev. Pere Andre, the Dominion Gazette, Scotch American and other papers, and Col. Spence, several papers from W. R. Gunn and the Secretary, also two volumes of valuable books from the President. The Secretary has desired to intimate that the oil reserved fuel yard are empty and donations in that line as well as in cash will be very acceptable. It takes about four gallons of oil to keep the lamps supplied.

THE TEARS

Instructions were received by the last number of Clerk of the Saskatchewan District Court, from the new Honorary Magistrate, Mr. E. H. Brown, to announce a special sitting of the Court in Prince Albert, for Wednesday next, the 12th inst., which has been deferred since the 12th inst. The notice is very short and it will be impossible to hold it generally more than the whole of this large district, in that case, unless we suffer. Although great, and we think necessary, delays have occurred in the regular sittings the irregular sessions of the Court, yet as the time for the usual holding of the Court, has long since passed, we think it would have been better to have waited until after New Year, so as to have given ample time to all parties interested. However the Honorary Magistrate has given the Honorary Magistrate power to hold the Court at any time, and on any notice however short, so we suppose it is legal. There will be some confusion about with already issued. Some lawyers had written for the August Court, which was not held, and again for the regular sittings in October, which did not come off, and we understand that some are waiting a third set for this Court. Now who is going to pay the piper, is the interesting question the new Judge, a will have to determine. There are costs of timing and service, especially where they live at a distance will amount to a pretty goodly figure. The justice does the case, he cannot in common justice be made to pay costs on more than one side. Even who is going to pay costs on the other side. This is a conundrum we leave to others to find out.

Judge Houston is expected to arrive in a few days.

PULL THE LINE.

An old squatter heaved a train the other day, and sat with an air of deep content, watching the conductor and brakemen. He noticed that when the conductor pulled the rope the train stopped, and he did not understand how so much power could be expended to start a cord, but determining not to exhibit that quality which he had so often craved - ineffectiveness - he remained quiet. He looked out at the men who at the waiting farm houses and fences that seemed to be trying to keep up with the train, and his straw hat blew off, springing from his head he gave the bell cord a vigorous pull, and the train soon came to a stand still. The old fellow got off, and found his hat near the steps, where it had been carried along by the motion of the train. When he re-ascended the coach, the conductor was furious. He pulled the bell cord as though he would break it, and turning to the old fellow, demanded:-

"What the devil have you been doing?"

"Dropped my hat," answered the old fellow. "Anything else? Hope I didn't break anything."

"I wish you had broken your head, and I am a mind to put you off, confound you."

"You ken confound me as much as you please, mister, but I'll be danged if it wouldn't take a good one to put me off."

"Why did you say that?"

"What made me jerk the bell line? I told you that I dropped my hat."

"Your hat's not worth fifteen cents."

"Not to you, mister, because it ain't yours. It ain't worth nothing to you, but when I've got an danged if I don't stop your contraband every time she tips off."

"Pull that rope again and I'll leave you in the woods."

"You may leave me, but danged if I leave my hat, an' when ever she tips, look out."

"If you don't want to lose your hat don't look out the window."

"The window was put here to look outen, an' I'm goin' to look outen it."

After awhile the train stopped on a bridge and the old fellow looked out. A gust of wind blew his hat off and it fell in the river.

"That!" he exclaimed. "Danged if she ain't gone."

"What's the matter?" asked the conductor who had witnessed the scene.

"Tipped the hat," said the old fellow pointing. "And then to lose it!"

The conductor laughed. "How did she happen to go?"

"See look out there," said the squatter, "an' see that fan after the hat, will you, see, look at him!"

The conductor looked out and the old fellow tipped his hat over into the river. "Some hater an' a bad pea," he said with a grin.

The conductor looked at him a moment and said:

"What do you drink, old fellow?"

"Everything stronger than water."

"Here's some very fine brandy," and he handed the old fellow a half pint flask. "Take a drink as a gratification of your fortune. We are in the same boat, you see, and I must confess that you have beaten me. Tuck it tight. A little of it goes a long way."

He turned up the flask, drained the last drop and said: "Ah, a little of it does go a long way - goes all the way an' holds a log rollin' as she travels. Take the bottle, an' fill her up again at the next opportunity."

The conductor looked at the old fellow and then the flask, but didn't say anything - Ark Traveler.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

Prince Albert Directory

AND BUSINESS GUIDE.

It is proposed to issue a Business Directory for the town of Prince Albert and District of Lorne in a pamphlet form which will contain the advertisements of each business establishment, (to be inserted at a moderate rate) and a descriptive notice of each.

The preface will contain a history of Prince Albert, its present condition and future prospects, together with a statement of this year's crops, as far as they can be ascertained for the District of Lorne, extent of acreage cultivated, number of head of live stock, increase over last year's crop, population of District, and other useful information, written by a well known journalist.

About 500 or more copies will be published according to the encouragement received, which will be distributed throughout the Dominion and the Mother Country.

It is hoped that by this means, benefit will result, not only to each individual advertiser and subscriber, but that the whole country will become better known and appreciated both at home and abroad, and a healthy emigration encouraged to this country.

Price of advertisement, whole page, with notice on opposite page, $10; two copies given free. Single copies, 50cts.

PECK'S BAD BOY AND HIS PA.

The Boy Strides New Girl, and Fawns his Watch.

"You seem sort of broke up this morning," said the grocery man to the boy, as he came and stood against the counter, under the house lamp that was leaning on his hat. "And I know you would be when I see you going down the dark alley last night with that ragged girl that peels apples. You are a sly one, and I have watched you, and I am satisfied you are on the wrong road. You better let up young man, or your people will be ashamed of you. Wasn't a boy that belongs to the better class of society goes down a dark alley with a sly girl?"

"But god darn it, she lived in the alley. If she hadn't lived in the alley I would have gone in there," said the boy, a little nettled at the remarks of the grocery-man, and trying to explain.

"Yes, that is all right," said the cheese fiend, winking at the carpenter who was smiling at another driver of the door, and who looked as though he would rather strip on the bottom of his pants, to hark up his low shoes. "Of course she lived there, and she inveigled you a respectable boy, into her den, and you didn't have to have your coat collar pulled off to get you to go. I am ashamed of you, to go off down a dark alley with a disreputable girl."

"There, hold on, co-odenn you," said the boy, as he grated his teeth and picked up a stick of store wood and drew it on the grocery man, his face pale as a ghost, while the carpenter stopped work to look on. "You say a watch against that poor girl, and down comes your grocery. She is a Christian, that girl is, though she don't put on any airs and go to church with silk dresses and ribbons. But she prays, by jingo, better than any of 'em. There ain't none of these prayer sheets that get up and talk big words, that can make me cry, but that little girl made me cry last night as though I had broke a pair of skates. You see her father is a drunkard, and he takes half she makes peddling apples to buy gin, and her grandmother, she got the one exception, and that takes the other half to support her. I know that girl when I went to school, and yesterday she come to me crying, and said she was going to ask a favor of me 'cause I had a heart in me. I don't know how she found it out, but anyway she said she had known it for years. It seems her drunken father had taken all her money, and she had gone on as a sly one, and she didn't have any to buy some of those cheap slyap lorgenes for her grandma, and she o' dady was chokin' up pretty rough, and she wanted me to lend her a dollar till she could realize on the apples she was going to get trusted for. Probably you noticed I haven't got any watch this morning. I have got my chain, with a bunch of keys on it in my pocket, but nobody will know I haven't got any watch unless they ask me what time it is, and then I will tell them it is ten o'clock, and I guess it has, 'cause pawn brokers never mind up watches. Well, air, I got four dollars on my watch, and I went and bought apples for her and a medicine for her grandma, and then I went down home with her. You are right about the alley being pretty rough but when I went in the little room where the old lady was on a bed, and heard her let off one of those regular hark from the tongue coughs, that sound away down cellar, where it is damp and mouldy, I felt you, it made me feel nervous. And when that ragged little girl got down on her knees and prayed, there in the dirt, and asked God to bless the friend that had risen up and lifted such a load off the sufferer, do you know, I felt as though I had swallowed a piece of turpentine or something hard, and couldn't get it up or down, and all the tears come to my eyes just like when you peep animals. She didn't use any of this high-fatin language, such as the high altar preachers use where you want a dictionary in your pew to find what the words mean. It was no full dress, formal prayer, like some of the ministers give us, when it seems as though they had just been given a letter of introduction to God, and wanted to show Him that He was in luck to get acquainted with so distinguished and educated a preacher. She didn't go on and advise God how to run this s, like some of the preachers I have heard, and act as though if God didn't take their advice He would lose his situation and be might lucky if he got a job carrying around a collection of the people that kind of a prayer."

The little girl got right down on her knees, and said, 'O, Father in heaven, just as though I was sitting right there in front of her on a three-legged stool, and she seems so confident that the heavenly father heard her that I could almost see His hand on her head, petting the poor child. She didn't tell God anything about my pawning my watch and buying the apples, and she didn't mention my name at all, but I could imagine that He was watching even the sparrows fall, was onto the bunch of keys in my vest pocket, hitched to the watch chain, bigger than a horse. Says, do you know, some of those long prayers by the dress parade preachers, who get a salary big enough to town a yacht, make me tired, and I want to go out in the woods and hear even a flock of blackbirds sing praise, in preference to listening to a long recital of what sort of angels sinners all the people are who are being prayed for, but I could have listened to that thirty, ragged girl pray for an hour, she was so natural and pitiful, and talking as God could understand it, whether He had ever graduated at college or not. But she wasn't talking against time, for wages, and she just seemed to have a little conversation with the good Lord just as a child would with its father, and then she got up and fired some medicine down her grandma, and made her a cup of tea on an oil stove, and toasted a piece of bread and poached an egg while I sat there thinking. Do you know she broke me all up. If it wasn't for that old calico dress, and the shoes run over at the heel, and the moth eaten stockings, I should have thought she was an angel, and by gum, I will pawn everything I have got for her to get things for her grandma, but somebody else has got to chip in to buy gin for the old man. I can't run a hospital and a distillery both, on one cheap watch, but I am going to work for the humane society next week, and that girl can have all the money I make, as long as the old lady's cough hangs on. Say, do you think there is any bath room in heaven where they can take such a dirty girl as that and make an angel of her? It will pass in a crowd? Take the dirt out from under her finger nails, and soak her hands in hot water, and put cold cream on them, and let her sleep a few nights with rubber gloves on, and I suppose they could make her pass as an angel. Well, I have got to go down to the humane society office. I was in a street car the other night, and the car was full and got of the track, and the nules couldn't pull it. All the men sat there and wouldn't get out. They read papers and acted mad, while the driver pounded the nules. I was on the back step, and I yelled. The members of the humane society are requested to get out of the car and help pull. You ought to have seen 'em. They all looked at each other and then they all got out, and some of them looked ashamed, but they helped the nules. The loss of the humane society head of it, and he said he would give me a job watching for butchers who want cattle. I guess I can work my way up, and I will finally hold the proud position of looking after lame horses that draw sick wagons. Well, I must go and send our doctor down the alley, to sound the old lady a cough, and have him charge it to me."

As the boy went out the grocery man told the carpenter that boy had a heart in him as big as a barrel, but you had to watch the raising box, all the same, when he was around.

THE TELEGRAPH.

To the Editor of The Times.

SIR.—After in silence from Prince Albert of several weeks, during which I find there has been considerable excitement over telegraphic matters, my attention has been drawn to two letters in the last number of the Regina Leader, professing to have been written in Prince Albert, some of the inaccuracies in which I am in a position to refute. From the letter signed "M" it would appear that the offer of a site for an office at Gooschen was not made by Mr. Clarke, or accepted by Mr. Gishorne until he arrived at Prince Albert in November. When I was in Regina about the 25th of September I had a conversation with Mr. Hartley Gishorne, District Government Telegraph Superintendent, as I felt somewhat interested in the subject, having been a member of the committee appointed to procure the place required by the Government, when he told me that he had decided to place the office in Gooschen, as Mr. Clarke had offered two lots there and the use of a house for an office, and besides as he was the largest contributor, he (Gishorne) considered that he had the best right to have it there, and moreover he had no offer from anybody else. I pointed out to him that the place selected was very inconvenient for the majority of the business people of Prince Albert and I offered myself to give him a convenient site on the Mission within fifty yards of the one now selected by the people. He replied that he "should see." I also referred him to Messrs. Hurd & Baker, who I was certain would give a lot in case the one offered by me did not suit. This will show that the statement that the site was not selected until after Mr. Gishorne went to Prince Albert is untrue and that it was all arranged before he came. This is all I know about the matter and I regret very much that I was absent during the exciting scene which have taken place, for if I had been here, I would have been found on the side of the people and in favor of placing the office where the majority of the people had decided it should be.

A. E. PORTER, M.P.

To the Editor of The Times.

SIR.—Neither time nor inclination will permit me to bandy any great amount of words through your columns with parties who claim to be setting the public right on an important question, deeming it necessary to send their contributions to a leading newspaper and allowing their lack of courage in being ashamed to publish their names to the article. But their cheek makes them deserving of a passing notice. Knowing that their letters were devoid of facts and full of ignorance may have been the excuse of "M" and "East End People" for presenting us through the Regina Leader an affidavit on telegraphic matters, if they have only to read their letters to agree with them. Eastern people who may have transferred their heads of Gooschen property without profit will in reading the articles above referred to regret their lack of judgment in parting with valuable lots in the centre of the Army business portion of our town in order that they might secure more land in a location which we now hear can only boast of a large floating population. I have no intention of contradicting any of the wild statements made up by those disappointed workers under a leader who disappears in the eleventh hour. Regarding that this is a matter the committee will no doubt deal with, should they consider it necessary to notice any more communications, which from their tone will lead the public to believe was penned by parties who sometime during their lives have been accused and convicted of playing the sordid part of informers. The originators of the articles referred to, certainly displayed no fear of being exposed by the report of the incorporation committee which was presented to the public last night, or the fact of river lots 77, 78 and 79 possessing an assessable property of $400,000 as well as the large floating population mentioned, while Gooschen, the heavy trade centre, can boast of about one-third the amount, would have deterred them from making statements which are so manifestly untrue. The fact that the end of the telegraphic line is here and here it will remain until such time as the H. B. Co. on small tractors and the very loose element by whom they are surrounded can claim a change. Alas! poor Gooschen, that your inhabitants should be so deceived.

It will be seen that there was a difference of 74 degrees in the temperature on the 28th Nov. and 5th Dec.

Chester Thompson's steam thrasher will leave for Barrow River on Monday.

The Rev. Archdeacon Mackay left for Carrot River to-day. He will return on Monday.

We are sorry to learn of the severe illness of the Hon. Lawrence Clarke, who has been confined to the house the past few days.

The opening service in the Church of England School Chapel, in the Lindsay District was held on Sunday Nov. 25th.

The Chapel is a neat log building capable of seating about 100 persons. It cost about $100 in addition to handsome subscriptions in lumber from the Hon. L. Clarke and Mr. D. H. Macdonald. The Chapel is under the charge of the Rev. Canon Platt. Service is held in the Chapel every Sunday morning.

An Appelle Murder.

A telegram has come to Colonel Richardson and Mr. Sheriff Chapleau, under the two Stephensons, ordering sentence for the murder of John McCarthy, until the pleasure of the Governor-General shall be known. It seems George has made some kind of confession in which he tries to implicate a third person—a white man—who, he says, gave him the receipt.—Regina Leader.

This Powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low tests, short weight alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.
